What is the LouLift?

It's a fast-charging, all-electric bus that produces zero air emissions. The LouLift replaced trolley vehicles, the highest polluting vehicles in TARC's fleet. LouLift is a clean and quiet way to get around downtown. Louisville has one of the largest fleets of this kind in the country.

How do they work?

Powered by batteries under the floor, the LouLift can travel for up to two hours and fully recharge on route in just a few minutes. Recharging is automatic, with the bus connecting to an overhead system that links to a high-capacity charger.
