Making Public Transportation More Accessible for All

Thanks to the 1990 Americans with Disabilities Act (ADA), public transportation has become more accessible for seniors and citizens with disabilities. Transit Authority of River City (TARC) strives to make public transportation more accessible, wherever life takes you.

TARC bus drivers announce all major street intersections and transfer points. They will announce special stops upon request.

Every TARC bus is equipped with a lift or ramp to assist riders using wheelchairs or anyone having difficulty boarding or exiting the bus. Drivers assist with boarding and securing wheelchairs. Priority seating is provided at the front of each bus for seniors and individuals with disabilities. Fares are reduced for people with disabilities and people age 65 and older with TARC I.D.

First-time Bus Riders

For more information on how to ride TARC, we offer various resources for first time bus riders. Found on TARC's homepage, www.ridetarc.org, are bus schedules, maps, and a link to "Rider Tools".

TARC also offers travel training for groups and individuals interested in learning how to ride the bus. To request travel training or for more information on how to ride TARC, please contact Customer Service at 502.585.1234, TTY 502.213.3240.

When Bus Travel Isn't Possible

If your disability prevents you from using TARC's daily bus service, you may qualify for complementary ADA paratransit service.

ADA paratransit service is a shared-ride service that ensures that citizens with disabilities receive comparable public transportation services to what every citizen receives.

TARC Provides TARC3 ADA Paratransit Service

TARC operates TARC3 to coordinate a variety of demand-response programs, including ADA paratransit. TARC3 serves different customer groups under different contracts, each with unique eligibility requirements and rules.

How Does TARC3 Paratransit Work?

TARC3 is a door-to-door shared ride service using small buses, vans and taxis. A paratransit vehicle will travel to any metro destination as long as it is within $\frac{3}{4}$ mile of a regular non-express TARC bus route during comparable days and times.

Since TARC3 is a shared-ride service, you will travel with other riders. Most trips aren't direct and may take up to 80 minutes. A TARC3 driver will escort you 'door-to-door' on both ends of your trip. The fare one-way is $3, round trip is $6.

Eligibility for ADA Paratransit

Having a disability does not necessarily qualify you for ADA paratransit. There is an application process to determine whether your individual disability prevents you from being able to travel on a regular bus.

Paratransit eligibility is based on TARC staff assessment. All information that is supplied by you and your doctor is reviewed to determine your eligibility. Additional information is gathered by phone or in a personal interview. Sometimes a free functional assessment is conducted at Spalding University's School of Occupational Therapy. The process helps ensure that ADA paratransit service is provided for individuals who meet ADA regulations.
